How many rigs are there in North Dakota?

The North Dakota rig count was last at 32, steady on the month. But two rigs could be dropped in 2025 as part of normal planned budget decisions that were made prior to the recent price dip, Anderson said. There are currently 13 active frac crews in North Dakota, consistent with January and February, the state regulator said.

Are North Dakota oil prices near breakeven levels?

North Dakota oil prices are near breakeven levels, the state's oil and gas regulator said on Tuesday, as a global trade war has stoked concerns of a recession and roiled energy markets. North Dakota is the third largest oil-producing state in the U.S., but its maturing oilfields require a higher oil price to turn a

Will North Dakota oil prices rebound?

"I expect prices to rebound once sanctions and tariffs are better understood by operating companies," Anderson added. North Dakota oil production fell by 11,000 barrels per day in February compared with January, falling to 1,164,000 bpd, the state regulator said, pointing to extreme cold during the month that hit production.
